Maxie: You can't publish these slides

It is ripping off Klara's intellectual Property

Maxie,

Thanks for asking me first. This is a definite NO. You do not have my permission to post any materials that you've created from my notes on any external source.

Best wishes,
Klara

Subject: Archiving Math1552 lecture notes from last summer?

Klara,

I recently realized that the wonderful archive.org (a useful source of preserved copies of documents lost to Google searches over time) allows me to post unpublished documents that are non-research papers. For example, see here:

<https://archive.org/details/fav-maxiedschmidt>

May I post my copies of the annotated lecture notes I created (derived mostly to PDF format from your PPT slides -- with credits, or course) on that archival site? I figured I would ask so as not to step on toes, or whatever. All of my tablet-annotated notes posted after each lecture on Canvas for the students are already on your GT Vault shared folder. This would make these documents available publicly, for posterity, under either a CC license or in the public domain.

Please let me know what you think. This is not urgent.

Michael,

Let me just say that all things considering, this has been a week from hell for me already! I had the flu, missed my big JMM talk puking up water while covered in a cold sweat, and yes, my mother is in the hospital still dying from cancer.

Because I am an individual with refined maturity this year, I acknowledge that one of the following two (i.e., not one) courses of action must have happened in translation. That is to say that the email chain you forwarded me is a gross misrepresentation of facts and circumstances:

1. Klara is being disingenuous as holy hell by sending you the multiple weeks old email correspondence in reaction to the short new message I sent after checking my GT email for the first time in a week last night.
2. Klara needs to put on spectacles and caffeinate at least twice from the coffee pot before trying to parse the complexities of forwarded messages with a short clarifying note from the sender attached.

When I was a Math 1552 TA with Sal, I got praise and thanks for pointing out to the lecturer hierarchy here that that sort of offensive commercialization and ripping off of the hard work of academics is unacceptable on the Piazza discussion boards. I am not being the asshole here. WTF?!?

Maxie
